For the Evening Telegraph. "KISS ME QUICK-MY MOTHER'S COMING." BY N. S READ.

The evening breeze flew freshly by, And twilight's dreamy shades fell o'er us, We heard the whippoorwill's sad cry
As bright the fire-flies flamed before us. We stood beneath the locust tree

And listened to the wild been humming, When Fanny softly said to me-"Oh, kiss me quick-my mother's coming."

Chorus. We stood beneath the locust tree And listened to the wild bees humming, When Fanny softly said to me-"Oh, kiss me quick-my mother's coming."

Now man, if wooed by cup or lip, Deserves but bitter shame betide him, If he refuse to take the sip Or taste the goods the gods provide him. of course, at once I gave the kiss, And timid fear to love succumbing,

Poor Fanny, in the moment's bliss, Forgot she feared her mother's coming. We stood beneath the locust tree, etc. But after pleasure cometh pain, And as our ready lips were parting, the glanced towards the shady lane

Where swallows in their play were darting, She saw her mother drawing nigh, With angry looks each sense benumbing, And as she fled I heard her sigh-"I knew I heard my mother coming."
We stood beneath the locust tree, etc.

CAPITULATION OF VERA CRUZ.

order and Tranquility Secured - Reported Assassination of the French Minister to Mexico.

VERA CRUE, July 2.-The English steamer Solent, hich was to have left to-day at noon, is remaining in ort awaiting important telegraphic despatches which re expected to arrive from the interior for the difrent consulates at this place. This city has been in decidedly feverish state since the capture of Maxiillian and his forces, which would have been altayed ong since by the surrender of the city (of Vera Cruz) General Benevides, commanding the Liberal proces, had it not been for the unfortunate appearance of our harbor of the great Mexican fliouster, Antonio oper de Santa Anna.

Some of the circumstances relative to the forcible elaure of Santa Anna.
Some of the circumstances relative to the forcible elaure of Santa Anna from the Virgina at Sleai may of have been reported, and I cannot retrain from articularly referring to the astate rejoineer of the fexican officer to the commanding officer of the Virginia when the latter proposed to prevent Santa Anna removal from his vessel by the spreading of be An erican flag on the gangway or the passage-ray; Captain Daken remarking that forcible possession of ranta Anna could not be effected except by fampling upon the American flag, the Mexican flicer replied, "We shall not trample upon or insuit ast flag, but will pass him under it." Accordingly, Dering forward some of his men, he directed them raise up the Stars and Stripes, and while the baner was in this position Santa Anna was passed on oard of the Liberal war aloop. This was mended as compilmentary and mediatorial act on their part, and must certainly give him a reputation for shrewd-test which we are not inclined usually to attribute to fexicans.

It is not positively known what disposition has and must certainly give him a reputation for shrewd-fest which we are not inclined usually to attribute to fexicans.

It is not positively known what disposition has seen made of Marquez, and all sorts of rumors and spresentations are made.

We have to amnounce the execution of Maximilian t Queretaro on the 19th of June, together with wenty more officers: among the latter are Miramon and Mejla. We have not been able to learn what, if nything, was the dying speech of the Archduke, Jur papers of the 3oth contain a reported "fare-rell" by Maximilian; but it is the same which ap-eared soon after his capture in the papers of the nited States, and which, I think, has been pro-ounced a forgery.
The commanding officer of the Austrian sloop-of-zar which left here a week since is said to have, by slegraph to the city of Mexico, demanded his body, which demand was refused. As their orders were to wait at Vera Cruz the departure of Maximilian from lexico, or the establishment of his empire, and as either of these issues were longer possible, the alizabeth sailed hence, and is expected to receive riders by the cable at New Orleans as to her future lovements.

Notwithstanding the fall of the empire and the exeovements. Notwithstanding the fall of the empire and the exe-Atton of its head, the Imperial Commissioner, backed whis generals at the place, refused to surrender the ly to General Benevides, commanding the be-eging Liberal forces, valnly dreaming that some frintious circumstance would enable them to avoid y in generals at the place, refused to surrender the ty to General Benevides, commanding that some fibitous circumstance would enable them to avoid pe impending issue by raking the flag of Santa Anna, boking for some miraculous deliverance of thu siliuster from the strong hands of his captors at shail, the American and English Consula, Mesara, Saulnier and Lecwitch, who have wisely adopted a determined and manly course throughout these Mexican coubles, remonstrated with the Imperial authories upon the folly of their suicidal course, were nally successful, and made an arrangement for he surrender of the city to themselves preparatory to heir surrender to the Liberal authorities. These gentemen foreseeing that the immediate occupation by seneral Benevides and his forces might result in some it the usual excesses of a conquering army, proposed hat the foreign troops, who numbered about the foreign troops, who numbered about five huntered, and were in the Imperial army, should be removed from the city before such occupation. This flep was resisted by the foreign troops, and they irreatened to sack the city, representing that they add been deceived by promises of good rations and one dollar a day for their pay—neither of which had they received. This muthous disposition was quelled by the appearance of the American gunoout Tacony and the French war ressel Jason, it being made known that any such attempt would be followed by active and determined realistory mensures. Under the supervision of the above Consula a purse was raised by voluntary subscription among the citizens and the sum of about an ounce was placed in the pockets of those adventurers on the American gunoout facious promises of them bore their trus, threatening violence. At this juncture the american and English Consula personally appeared among them and Individually relieved them of the trust, threatening violence, at this juncture the american and English on the sum of the dispance of the created for the payment of the English war vessel Jason, upon re efference and their successful attempts to spare effusion of blood. mor Don Domingo Burean and Quevas were not

and. They are reported to have gotten out of the untry by sea, or be still hidden in the country. A rge treasury bag is said to be in their immediate large treasury bag is said to be in their immediate company.
The fever is abating at Vera Cruz, and prices are decidedly lower. Markets are well supplied from the sardens of the neighborhood, and we are hoping for a long respite from scarcity of food and revolution.
Yesterday General Gomez went alongside of the English packet ship from the Spanish man-of-war and asked to be taken as passanger to Havana. The Commander of the Solent, fear ul of an unfortunate sequel should be consent, refused to receive hingles a passenger, and he returned to the Spanish man-of-war. This was well, for in the evening of yesterday the Liberal authorities searched for him on board the Solent, and had he been found there the result would have been doubtful.
